U.S. officials fear that a failure to close the wide gap separating Israel's and Egypt's positions would leave a continuing stalemate. would leave a continuing stalemate that might eventually cause some Middle East leaders to think that only another war could break the deadlock. They are said to see no hopeful prospects now for a further U.S. diplomatic effort if the Camp David summit founders.

Moreover, President Carter has staked his own and U.S. prestige on this dramatic effort to find a solu-tion to the complex dispute. The president already has proclaimed the national security of the United States to be "vitally involved . . . to the Middle East."

Behind this stated view is the concern that a new Mideast explosion could bring about a confronta-tion with the Soviet Union, which opposes the U.S. effort to achieve a solution. Furthermore, there is fear that a new Mideast war would imperil the continuing supply of Arab oil to the West.

TEHRAN, Sept. 4 (UPI) - Hundreds of thousands of Moslems. some tossing flowers and changing "Soldier, why do you kill your brother?" marched through the capital and dozens of other cities today in nationwide demonstra-tions against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Officials said two policemen and two demonstrators were killed in one clash in flam and one demonstrator was reportedly killed in the holy city of Qom. Otherwise, the marches were peaceful.

About 15,000 demonstrators in Tehran carrying anti-shah placards and posters, and reinforced by hundreds of curious onlookers, marched about 612 miles through the city.

Thousands of the worshippers lined up on the street, blocking all traffic, and kneeled in prayer as a priest recited passages from the Koran Many old people among the onlookers wept as they watched the demonstrators pray.

The large crowd then rose and began to march down the road, chanting anti-sbah slogans and calls for the establishment of an Islamic government.

At one point shortly after the march began, the troops appeared to be provoked by the crowd's strongly critical placards and appeared to be preparing to move against the demonstrators.

The protesters quickly gathered around several military trucks and began shouting: "Brother soldier, why do you kill your hrother?" An army officer rose and told the demonstrators they were "indeed our hrothers. But we have our duty to fulfill." Whereupon he was

WASHINGTON (NYT) - Tiny computers now are regulating the carburetors in the family car. Larger models are enabling doctors to scan the inside of the body three-dimensionally to look for disease. Big computers are analyzing weather variables and improving forecasts. Voice-activated computers are on the verge of turning out business

And as computers become either more nimble or more compact. their ability to solve problems and take over routine chores is increas-

This revolution in data and information processing, which started less than a generation ago is only in its infancy, according to an expert, and the further adaption of the computer to solve problems is going to revolutionize the U.S. way of life.

"I believe we are in the early stages of developments to the science and technology of information processing that will truly revolutionize our society," Mr. Atkinson said. Both a psychologist and a mathematician, he has been lovolved with computer theory and development since the 1950s.

Huge Advances

"In the last 30 years," be said, "computer computations have gone from a few instructions per second at a cost of several dollars to millions of instructions per second at a cost of less than one cent. But such dramatic indicators of progress do not measure the full impact of what is taking place or what is likely to occur in the next 30 years."

Technology Will Change Way People Live and Work

"There can be little doubt," be continued, "that these changes will alter the way people live and earn a living, and the way they perceive themselves and relate to one another. These changes will have more impact than any of us can foresee today."

Mr. Atkinson noted that, "over the past decade, the computer has come into wide use in the commercial sector" and that "we now take for granted the idea of a computer handling monthly bills, making airline reservatious, keeping track of bank accounts, scrutinizing tax returns, and totaling up a bill at the supermarket with the aid of a laser

"For the most part, computers have taken over tasks previously bandled by human beings," he said. But, he added, that is now changing, "Problems are being posed for the computer that do not just replace humans, but do totally new things."

Mr. Atkinson cited the new class of "smart instruments," which, he said, possess amazing sensitivity as a result of their ability to process large quantities of data, as among those computers that are changing fixed methods of doing things.

"In a surprisingly short time, computer-based methods to synthesize gists," he said, referring to the so-called CAT scanners, the acronym standing for Computerized Axial Tomography. They were introduced to bospitals in the early 1970s, and more than 1,000 are now in use making diagnoses of far greater accuracy than previously.

Faster Computers

Faster computers also are aiding science by analyzing huge amounts of molecular data collected by infrared spectroscopy and nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy, thus giving a far better and faster look inside the world of atomic physics. "One X-ray crystallographer has remarked that a lifetime's work can now be performed in a single year with new instruments equipped with microprocessors," he said, adding that "nowadays, analysis by X-ray diffraction of the structure of medium-sized molecules is done completely by computer."

Microcircuit information-processing systems, which are the heart of the digital watch and the hand-held calculator, "decrease in size and cost while their processing power increases," be said. "Today, a welldesigned commercial integrated circuit chip can accommodate up to 16,000 functions, but in the near future this density will increase to 160,000 or more," Mr. Atkinson said.

"Clearly the remarkable data-handling devices on the market today represent only the first steps toward almost universal access to sophisricated information-processing systems," be said, adding that he believes the net result will be more significant than the construction of the railroads in the last century or the introduction of the automobile to this century.

Rescuers first found the three who survived the shootout and flew them by belicopter to a hospital bere for treatment of minor injuries. They later found the five others, including a small girl who had spent the night wandering through the bush.

The military spokesman said that the guerrillas had looted the plane after killing the 10 survivors.

According to the spokesman, army troops who arrived at the scene of the crash this morning said that a starboard engine appeared to have exploded and that the starboard side of the plane was heavily scorched.

Mr. Zimis and others said that, unless a student in the United States becomes a political extremist, his activities in the United States are usually overlooked when he returns home, provided that he ceases such activity there.

Some experts separate the Iranian student presence here into two groups: the larger group simply expressing rejection of the shah and his government, and a smaller, hard-core group looking for a vic-leot overthrow of the regime. The Iranian Student Association has been infdtrated by informers for the Iranian secret police and probably other agencies, much as the old Communist Party in the United States was overrun by FBI informants. Some tranian students have been suspected of links to various organizations, from the Communist Party to Middle East terrorist groups.

Nancy Hormanche, a Houston attorney who has represented Iranian students, said, "Students come here from all over the world. But none demonstrate more than the transan students. They are consistent. It doesn't matter if no one pays attention to them. They feet they have to do it.

Introducing Mini-cassette 2 with visual mark and find.

Philips' new dictation system features the amazing Mini-cassette 2 with Visual Mark & Find. This unique facility greatly simplifies dictation indexing, and allows separately identifiable messages to be recorded. No more hand-written notes; no separate strips to fill in. And it enables rapid access to any recorded item. Mini-cassette 2 has, on each side, a special built-in indexing strip. After each dictation item, or before recording an important message for your secretary, simply press a button on the microphone and a mark is made on the strip. At the same time, a special tone is recorded on the tape. From the marks, your secretary can see how much dictation has been recorded, and if the tape contains any messages. With our new machines, designed to recognize the special tones, any recorded item can be found - quickly and accurately. Afterwards, the marks can be erased, so the cassette can be used indefinitely.

The system comprises two new dictation/transcription machines, 302 and 303, and a new transcriber 304. We've also included our famous pocket memos 185 and 195, transcriber 186. and our self-contained, remotecontrolled 260 dictation system. These and other units from our previous Minicassette dictation equipment range are conpatible with Mini-cassette 2 for recording and playback. Which is the sort of thoughtfulness you'd expect from the world's leading supplier of dictation equipment.

U.K. Pay Restraints Produce Mixed Results

By Bernard D. Nossiter LONDON, Sept. 4 (WP) -Three summers ago, the British economy appeared to be in desperate straits. Inflation was running at more than 30 percent and climbing. Unions were winning wage increases of like amounts to stay in step, and these were fueling further infla-

The talk on both sides of the Atlantic was a measure of the panie. In these circumstances, a newly elected Labor government, after spending much of its first year in office debating whether to pull out of the Common Market, finally act-ed. It persuaded the Trades Union Congress. Britain's most powerful labor organization, to accept a policy limiting pay increases over 12 months to 10 percent.

By the summer of 1976, inflation and wage increases had been cut in half. The talk of a collapsing Britain did not cease, but it was more

Club of Rome Renews Warning

Global Energy Crisis Held Near

By Louis B. Fleming

ROME, Sept. 4 - On the 10th anniversary last month of the Club of Rome, 400 ambassadors, statesmen, scientists, industrialists, economists and others tried to crowd into a room designed for 150. Then the lights went out.

"That pretty well sums it up," someone said. "Too many people and an energy crisis."

The Club of Rome, an association of 100 policy-makers from 25 nations, seeks an international debate on the global problems of industrialization, population growth, the environment, and the growing gap between rich and poor nations. During its 10 years of existence, the club has issued several controversial reports — the most famous being its study, "The Limits to Growth," which, after examning major world trends, forecast global collapse in the next century unless urgent action is taken to manage the world's diminishing rescurces.

back to school here, sweethearts walk along the country roads at sundown and farmers have gone to their fields again as life returns to normal in southern Lebanon.

The restoration of confidence to this part of the country, which has lived in insecurity for more than three years and suffered the devas-tating Israeli invasion last March, is perhaps the major achievement of the United Nations peacekeeping force, whose six-month mandate comes up for renewal this month. A tour of the battalions that make up the 6,000-man multinational force reveals a mood of satisfaction mixed with frustration. The peacekeepers are happy about the progress toward normalization of Lebanese life in the area but recognize that the job is far from fin-

They emphasize that the problem is now essentially poblical, linked to overall Middle East peace. Under UN Security Council resolu-tions 425 and 426, the UN troops were to confirm the withdrawal of Israeli forces and belp the Lebanese government restore its anthority in the area.

Main Accomplishments

In the headquarters of the UN Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL), at the southern coastal town of Enn Naqoura, the deputy commander, French Gen. Jean-Paul Cuq summed up the main accomplishments of the UN mission:

 Restoration of near-normal life, enabling 90 to 95 percent of the population to return to the South. More than half of the half million inhabitants had fled during the Israeli occupation.

• Confirmation of the withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon on June 13. • Prevention of hostile acts between the adversaries and the establishment of general calm. "We must now complete the deployment of our forces to the border and restore the effective authority of the Lebanese government,

Gen. Cuq said, emphasizing that this would take time. But there is a general feeling in the UN battalions that UNIFIL has reached its "political limits" and that further progress depends on decisions in Tel Aviv and The political problem was clearly demonstrated a month ago, when Lebanese Christian milinas, sup-ported by Israel, blocked a Leba-nese Army battalion from moving south to the border area in the first

The company has destroyed 6,000 clusbomb units, 2,800 mines and 1,800 rockets and shells in addition to the usual work of repairing roads and bridges and improving defense

All but 300 of Jouaiya's 3,000 inhabitants fled the town during Is-raeli occupation but now everyone has come back. There are similar signs of nor-malization in most of the South.

Motherhood Not Must for French Women

PARIS, Sept. 4 (UPI) - An overwhelming majority of French women now hold that childbearing is no longer the key to successful womanhood and that a couple's life should be based on total equality of the

"Ten years is the maximum we have to be ready," according to the author of the energy study, Thierry de Montbrial, a senior adviser in the French foreign ministry.

Energy Ontlook Grim

The study dims hope for quick development of alternative energy sources and sees the century ending with the world still dependent on oil and coal, and, to a small extent, nuclear-generated power, with some extra time perhaps provided by new oil discoveries.

There is a certain sensitivity among some club members. "Since publication of that report, there has been the idea that the club com-prises a bunch of pessimists," said Eduard Pestel, minister of science for Lower Saxony and himself a scientist. "I resent that.

"We are neither optimists, in the sense that we think the world simply can muddle through and that we don't need to do anything, nor pessimists in the sesne of thinking that nothing can be done," Mr. Pes-tel said. "We find that totally we introduce with that totally irresponsible."

What does Mr. Peccei think of the disappointments of the decade? "To tell you the truth, I feel a certain despondency," he said. "But I am an optimist. I think that the human being may be greedy, stupid, unprepared, selfish, but not so greedy, unprepared, stupid and selfish as to be suicidal.

"I think that something is developing within modern men and women in such a way that one episode, one disaster, one charismatie leader, something, may come one day and wake up this dormant pacity. But what a jump it must be, if the projections of the Club of Rome are to be believed. Austerity is an urgent require-ment if there is to be a reestablish-

U.S. Resources Diminish

Mr. Peccei cited a continued depreciation of the Earth, saying that topsoil in the United States is being lost so rapidly that "by the year 2000, increased domestic consumpuon may well absorb all the food produced in the country.'

He added that rain forests are being razed so fast that, if the practice continues at the same rate, they will disappear in three or four decades, "paralleling the practical drying-up of oil fields, but with far more severe consequences for mankind."

The diagnosis and prognosis are precise in the view of the Club of Rome, but the cure is not.

"The overriding goal is to produce a mature, responsible, self-governing and well-managed global community which, while preserving cultural identities and social dynamics, should give the con-science of the species precedence over national and class conscience," Mr. Peccei has concluded. "The process will no doubt be long, tortuous and painful, but it is certainly within the realm of the possible if we all accept the basic

Those guidelines, he said, are:

To reestablish a satisfactory and sustainable equilibrium, both within the human system and in its relations with nature."

 To provide "a modicum of global planning." Tn accept that "modern man cannot change his fate if he himself does not change."

Such guidelines risk dismissal as impossible dreams, but the club has ed to belp governments with their decision-making processes. In the second, still incomplete, "human learning ability" is being analyzed to see how to expedite the learning required if the world is to get on the right track.

China De-Emphasizing Little Red Book

TOKYO, Sept. 4 (AP) — Chairman Mao Tse-tung's little red book, the book of quotations from the late Chinese leader often waved aloft by tens of thousands of idolizing Chinese, may be knocked off China's best-seller list.

China's leading newspaper says real students of Chairman Mao's thought now must study his whole philosophy, not scattered quips, sentences and sayings that could be interpreted any number of ways.

There have been hims from China that some ideas of the revered founder and chief philosopher of the People's Republic might be un-dergoing some re-evaluation. The book, traditionally bound in red and made to easily fit in a pocket, contained Chairman Mao's ideas on subjects ranging from po-litical philosophy to everyday life.

Context Necessary

An article in the state newspaper People's Daily, broadcast in part yesterday by the official Hsinhua news agency and monitored here, said Chairman Mao's quotations must be understood in context and in connection with certain times, places and conditions.

The article attacked the late defense minister Lin Piao and the deposed "Gang of Four." The four, including Chairman Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and three other top officials, lost out to Hua Kuo-feng in a struggle for power after Chair-man Mao's death in September.

The People's Daily article quoted which refugees will be rescuted Chairman Mao himself as saying abroad, after foreign nations advise "If anyone claims that any comrade - for instance, any comrade to take. of the Central Committee, or for understood the laws governing the Chinese revolution, then he is a braggart and you must on no account believe him."

Chinese Begin Project To Divert the Yangtze

By Linda Mathews

has completed preliminary work on one of the most ambitious construction projects in history - a series of huge canals to divert the waters of the Yangtze River into the drought-plagued plains of North

The Chinese news agency reported that the 700-mile route of the proposed waterway was surveyed

last month. It said that the project is designed to "solve North China water shortages that have baffled minds for centuries" and have left the country vulnerable to devastaling famines.

The Chinese press has not indicated when construction will begin on the canal, although it has been adopted formally as a key plank in the 10-year economic plan that expires in 1985. The waterway would not make China completely immune from drought, but foreign agriculture experts believe that it would move Peking substantially closer in agricultural self-sufficiency, one of its ma-jor goals. Without a reliable water source, the northern plains are struck periodically by droughts so severe that China must in some years spend half of its foreign-exchange earnings on imported grain.

The agency gave no indication of the canal's cost, but analysis here believe that the government's outlay ultimately will surpass $10 hillion. China's economic planners apparently have decided to push shead with the project, despite the expense, because north China literally has run out of water.

Surface water and underground water have been utilized to the greatest possible extent but are still inadequate to meet the needs of industrial and agricultural develop-ment," the Kwangming Daily, a Peking newspaper, disclosed last month in a report on the water-diversion project. "Water. . . short-ages in North China have become more and more serious in recent years," sometimes requiring household rationing and closure of facto-

To allay such shortages, the Ministry of Water Conservation and Power in effect has proposed the creation of a man-made river that

HONG KONG, Sept. 4 - China would channel about 5 percent of the Yangtze's flow through three arid provinces and eventually into Tientsin, an industrial center of 7 million people.

Follows Grand Canal

For much of its length, the new waterway would follow the route of the ancient Grand Canal. The canal, begun more than 2,500 years ago, was completed by the Mongol Emperor Kublai Khan in the 13th century and linked the lower Yangize hasin in the capital he es-tablished on the North China plain, the city now known as Peking.

Although its construction was once considered almost as great a feat as the Great Wall of China, the Grand Canal long ago became ob-solete as a means of transportation. Short stretches remain open but can accommodate only small craft. Other parts of the canal were so damaged by bombing in World War II and specessive floods that they are impassable.

Mao Tse-tung often talked of terouting the Yangtze and joining the Grand Canal to the extensive irrigation network huilt since the 1949 revolution.

According to the Kwangming Daily, the diversion scheme adopted by Mao's successors in March calls for dredging the Grand Canal and excavating 150 miles of new waterway.

The major expense will be the construction of the 15 locks and 30 pumping stations needed to lift the water from Yangchow, a city near the Yangtze's mouth, 125 feet over 450 miles to the level of the banks of the Yellow River, the watershed between North China and South China. Once past the Yellow, the diverted water will flow naturally down to Tientsin because of the slope of the land.

The canal, once completed, will irrigate 10 million acres in the provinces of Kiangsu, Anhwei, Shantung and Hopei — more than 5 per-cent of China's arable farmland and insure a stable supply of water to Tientsin and the other industrial cities of North China, the Kwangming Daily said,

The Several Forms of Labor

Lahor Day is properly the time to celebrate organized labor and workers in general; and we would not wish to take anything away from this celebration. We would suggest, nevertheless, that there are forms of work that are almost never acknowledged yet also deserve an hooorable place in the Labor Day parades. In physics, you'll remember, the definition of "work" is the exertion of energy that makes something move. Some - not we - would say that such a definition excludes waiters and postal workers, on strike or oot. But those workers are never so excluded in the public mind. Scholars, oo the other hand, make nothing move, so, just because they sit around and read books, people often assume that they aren't working. They toil not, neither do they spin. But consider how, like lilies in the field, they grow. Scholars should be included every year in the observance of Labor Day.

Then there are the composers and painters, who move the spirit, but nothing tangihle which may he why their products are called "works," while they themselves are thought of as the leisure class. Add to them actors and dancers - and teachers, certainly. The only thing we see teachers move is chalk, yet the hest of them set thoughts in motion that go forever. They shouldn't be left out.

Don't leave out chess players either, who do move objects, though very slowly. And remember the flagpole sitters and the fishermen, who sit very still but are working like beavers. Strippers work, too. Doo't forget to cover them. And models, and beauty queens. Think of the body-huilders, who work up a sweat merely looking at themselves. And there are the mummers; anyooe who thinks that dressing up in feathers and marching in Philadelhia while playing the hanjo iso't work is just kidding himself.

Can we not also say a good word for those who work so diligently at their personality traits that they virtually become them? We are thinking of worrywarts, whiners, skinflints, schemers and the like, whose traits take hours of concentration to sustain work without doubt. Forget oot the hypochondriacs, either, or the egomaniacs, or the xenophobes. Forget not the optimists and sycophants. Workers all.

Finally, make room for writers of all kinds - poets and novelists - who move only the cartridges on their typewriters, yet with each chug shake oations. And make a special place - perhaps a parade float of their own - for editorial writers and columnists, who spend their long days sitting first one way, then the other; who pace and mutter; who sometimes rest their weary heads in their hands, and sometimes not. Talk about work.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

A Striking Example

Two news reports at the beginning of the school year put the spotlight on areas of concern and of hope. The first is the outbreak of teacher strikes in city after city in the United States at the very moment that teachers ought to be husy welcoming children to their classrooms. The secood is an announcement by U.S. District Judge Arthur Garrity that he is taking South Bostoo High School, so recently embattled over desegregation, from federal receivership.

The militancy of striking teachers has been most dramatically demonstrated in New Orleans. But strikes are also under way in Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Michigan. And they appear likely in Cleveland, Seattle and elsewhere.

Teachers unquestionably have a right to cost-of-living adjustments; inflation eats at their salaries just as surely as it does at anyone else's. But for wage demands beyond that, well, the times could hardly be worse for teacher militancy. There is considerable public dissatisfaction with the schools. Added to that is the steady spread of tax rebel-lioo since California's Propositioo 13. An aging population, containing steadily fewer families with school-age children, needs little encouragement to vote against school taxes.

Under such circumstances, teacher strikes hegin to look like professional suicide. They can only reinforce widespread feelings that more school dollars only inflate the cost of schooling — hut do oot improve its quality. Still, in most places in the United States, schools will open and the aura of a new beginning will be real. And nowhere will that be more true, or more welcome, than in South Boston. Not so many mooths ago, the once all-white high school there was the scene of anti-integration violence. Now it impresses Judge Garrity as a place where white and black students alike are "proud of what they are doing." Their efforts, and Judge Garrity's conscientious persistence, demonstrate -- despite the unhappy example of over-militant teachers — how to rekindle public faith in the potential of public educational community" ought to find some way of using "military force" to put an end to the ruthless savagery now going forward in Cambodia.

Every report from that once-gentle country is revolting - forced labor, mass relocations of the population, inhuman regimentation, the bloody elimination of any form

All this is repellent to any civi-lized person, but it did seem strange to bear talk of armed intervention from one of the leaders of the late anti-war movement. One of the cardinal points of that move-ment, after all, was that the United States bad no business trying by military force to impose any particular social order on a country of which it knew little and in which American interests were limited.

Not So Odd

On second thought, McGovern's outburst (if that is what it was) may not have been so odd as it appeared. For one thing, the anti-war movement, at the end, included a lot of people who had supported — or at least not opposed — the war in the beginning (including me). That reflects the fact that the Vietnam war derived, at least partially, from the kind of liberal internationalism and anti-communism that found perfect expression in John Kennedy's inaugural address.

This view of the world and of American interests was carried to its logical but unpleasant extreme —the United States as "policeman of the world" — in Vietnam. It's not surprising that numerous liberal internationalists, recoiling more from the extreme rather than from their basic view, turned against the war, sometimes the more intensely for having participated or acquiesced in its origins.

And it isn't loo surprising, either, that the old impulse to clean things up around the world should surface again, however unwisely, this time in revulsion against the borrors of Cambodia.

This impulse is sometimes deridbut Gerald Ford and Henry Kiss-inger wanted to involve the United LONDON, Sept. 4 (UPI) -- Prof. Manolis Andronikos told an audience of fellow archaeologists today that the excavations near the village of Vergina in Greece, believed to have uncovered the grave of the fa-ther of Alexander the Great, may actually have found the royal cemetery of Macedonia.

He told delegates to the International Congress of Classical Archaeology that a second tomb excavated near his nriginal discovery of what appears to be the last resting place of King Philip of Macedon, is also apparently royal although not as richly furnished with gold and silver as the vaulted sepulchre in which Philip's bones had lain for 2.300 years.

The second tomb dates from the second quarter of the 4th century B.C., Prof. Andronikos said. and appears to be that of a member of a royal family "or possibly that of a king, though of an era — not as rich an era — before Philip."

"If this is a royal tomb," he said. "then we are in the royal cemetery of Macedon," he said.

tions in a countrified accent of dropped aitches and crushed vowels, wrapped up in a checky grin. Miss Ayres is rapidly becoming the unofficial poet laureate.
Within the last two years, Miss

Ayres has produced two books of verse ("Some of Me Poetry" and invevitably, "Some Mnre of Me Poetry") that together have sold more than a million copies. She has also made three records that have grossed in excess of $1 million. Her series on commercial British television last year soared in the ratings. and her "concert" tour of Australia and New Zealand last spring was sold oot. This month she will bring out two more books of verse and another record. Next year, there will be a second TV series and another concert tour. It may seem a remarkahle degree of acclaim for the perpetrator of such stanzas as: I am very fond of hedgehogs Which makes me want to say That I am struck with wonder, How there's any left today. For each morning as I travel And no short distance that, All I see are hedgehogs, Squashed. And dead. And flat.

Some Critics

Indeed, to some critics the name of Ayres is anathema. "This terrible half-witted nonsense must represent some sort of Lowest Common Denominator," sniffed the Spectator, denigrating Miss Ayres as the "Swan of Wantage" (a town near her own village of Standlake). But the more equalitarian Listener predicted that Miss Ayres "could become a high-brow cult as well as a household name . . . giving poetry recitals in the Queen Elizabeth

To Pam Ayres herself, so much debate seems a tempest in a teapot. In her defense, she protested that "I've never called myself a poet. When I think of poetry, I think of beautiful things, of Robert Frost. I'm a humorist. I write verse to make people laugh. Initially, I wrote it just to make myself laugh."

Pam Ayres 31, is Britain's latest poetry sensation. Despite some unfriendly criticism ("This terrible half-witted nonsense

The youngest of six children from a working-class family, Miss Ayres, who left school at 15, used to recite her poems to her own guitar accompaniment at her local pub. In 1974 a friend engineered her radio debut, at which she read "The Bat-tery Hea." "I'd only got about four poems then in my little stock and the reason I did "Battery Hen" was that it wasn't a particular favorite of mine, and people said be careful or you'll get it pinched." she recalled. "And I thought if they pinched that, I wouldn't mind too ent show soon followed, and a star was born.

The highlight of her career so far has been her appearance hefore Queen Elizabeth last December at the Royal Variety Show. "I'm very fond of the monarchy, glad we've got a queen," Miss Ayres said. "I wouldn't have it any other way." Surrounded by such celebrities as

Her Attitude

Such diffidence characterizes Miss Ayres attitude toward the show husiness world in which she finds herself. Despite her abundant onstage poise and personality, offstage she becomes a big-boned and simple countrywoman who is nonissed by her success. "It's a hit like talking about someone else," she said. "I feel very ordinary, really." Stardom has brought legal rights, dwindling friendships and, whenever she leaves her quiet village, an uneasy fame. "It does give you a hunted feeling," she nnted, "to go into Marks & Spencer and know everyone's looking at you and whispering."

Still, success has also paid for a home and car for bersell, and a car for "me mum and dad," and she has accordingly scheduled another series of TV shows and concerts in Britain and abroad. Writing poetry has lost some of its fun, but she has enjoyed writing a children's book, in prose, about a friendship between two pigeons. If it is well received, she hopes in do more chil-dren's books. "You dan't have in fight in make them rhyme," she explained."

I remember its voraciousness in the water and I remember also its firm white flesh on the plate, not as fine as bass, per-haps, but fine enough. Yet now I read that the pickerel is not a fish. it is a word, and a misused word at that. It is an Americanism applied abusively to certain comparatively small species of the genus Esox which a purist, or an Englishman, would call a pike. If by chance a Britisher refers to a pickerel, he is speaking dialect, and he means a young nr small specimen of Eson

Not only does the pickerel not exist, it does not exist in several American incarnations. Among these fieutious fish are the grass pickerel, which is found from Nova Scotia to Texas, reaches a maximum length of two feet and is decoratively marked with dark bands on its flanks. I am always surprised by their rare beauty, as if they were fahulous fishes, they are so foreign to the streets, even to the woods, foreign as Arabia to our Concord life. They possess a quite dazzling and transcendent beauty which separates them by a wide interval from the cadaverous cod and haddock whose fame is trumpeted in our streets. They are not green like the pines, nor gray like the stones, nor blue like the sky, but they have to my eyes, if possible, yet rarer colors, like flowers and precious stones, as if they were the pearls, the animalized 'nuclei' or crystals of the Walden water. They, of course, are Walden all over and all through; are themselves small Waldens in the animal kingdom, Waldenses, It is surprising that they are caught here, that in this deep and capricious spring, far beneath the rattling teams and chaises and tinkling sleighs that travel the Walden road, this great gold and emerald fish swins. I never chanced to see its kind in any mar ket; it would be the evnosure of all eyes there. Country-to-Country Differences Puzzling

Drug Prescription Given a Checkup

By Lynn Payer

DARIS (IHT) - A patient admitted to the medical ward of a U.S. teaching hospital is nearly three times as likely to be receiving: the heart drug digoxin and the antihypertension drug propranolol as a comparable patient admitted to a university hospital in Scotland.

During his hospital stay he will receive twice the number of drugs as his Scottish counterpart (8.9 versus 4.6). If the reason for admission is heart attack, the U.S. patient is twice as likely to receive digoxin or an anti-arrhythmic drug. The U.S. patient is also more likely to receive drugs for constipation, diarrhea, pain, anxiety, insomnia, diabetes, hypertension, angina and

These differences were among those pointed out in a symposium on geographical differences in drug use held during the recept Seventh International Congress of Pharmacology here. In the past few years a number of studies have been car-ried out studying drug-use patterns, and the results have shown such widely different patterns that even the researchers have been startled.

Not only are drugs for "soft indications," such as the minor tranquillizers, prescribed two to three times as often in comparable and often bordering countries, but so are drugs for diabetes, high blood pressure and heart attack diseases considered to have fairly well-defined indications for treat-

The implication, of course, is that either doctors in some countries are overprescribing or those in others are underprescribing. Pharmacologists whn have performed the studies caution that, at present, neither conclusion can be drawn. Further studies are needed, they say, to correlate prescription patterns with health — both before and after the prescription. terns with health

Some Comparisons

The patterns of prescription drug use beginning to emerge show that Swedish and U.S. doctors tend to prescribe lots of drugs when com-pared with their Czech and Scottish colleagues. Danish prescription drug use is intermediate, except for psychotropic drugs, where they rank above their Swedish neigh-bors, leeland has relatively low consumption of anti-diabetic and anti-hypertensive drugs hut high use of tranquillizers; whereas the Finns use lots of anti-hypertensives

"In the countries studied and compared so far," said. Dr. Per Knut Lunde, a professor of clinical pharmacology at the University of Oslo, "there are no good grounds to believe that differences fin disease incidence] or unequal health services offered are really the major

"In addition to treating the pa-tients more often for a variety of conditions. American physicians tended to use more drugs for each indication," said Dr. David Law-son of the Glasgow Royal Infirmary in Scotland. Three times as many Americans were receiving drug treatment for diabetes, he even though the incidence of diabetes in the two populations was dence of diabetes differs as markedly as drug utilization between the countries.'

If such differences do not reflect differences in disease, then what do they reflect? No one at the symposium claimed to have the answer hut they suggested several hypotheses.

One factor that plays a role, of course, is that of the drug regulatory authorities. Countries that have many different types of drugs on the market tend to be large users. In Sweden, for example, there are six different beta-blockers (used in the treatment of hypertension) on the market whereas in Czechoslovakia there is only one. Swedes use 30 times as many beta-blockers per capita as do the Czechs.

Another may be the relative importance of the pharmaccutical industry in a country's economy. Those with very high drug use -Japan, France, West Germany, and Sweden - tend also to be those with a strong drug industry.

But attitudes also seem to play: major role. "Partly," said Dr. Lunde, "the difference in drug utilization could reflect that you do not always reach the same conclusions in medicine - that is, whether to treat or not - even after thorough considerations."

The Swedes, for example, "beheve in drugs," he pointed out, notsity Hospital in Sweden, found a ing that they have been described in the Scandinavian press as having "a Reader's Digest mentality," or a helief in simple chemical solutions to everything.

"They are the Americans of Europe," he said.

GATT Cites Woes of Inflation

By Bhushan Bahree

> GENEVA. Sept. 4 (AP-DJ) — In a hard-hitting and unusually blunt report, the General Agreement on Taril's and Trade has debunked efforts by industrial nations to resolve economic problems and to seek monetary stability without first lowering inflation rates and aligning them more closely with Identifying inflation as the cause of the world's economie woes, GATT economists singled out the United States, saying that Washington must take the lead in reducing it. "Once the dollar's purchasing power begins to stabilize, stabilization of the whole system would be that much easier," the econothe economists say in their annual report.

GATT, under whose rules more than four-fifths of world trade is conducted, said: "The inescapable conclusion is that industrial coucrries can only move towards increased growth and employment, and towards sustainable payments positions and more stable exchange rates, by reducing their inflation rates to the levels experienced until the mid-1960s."

The report stresses that anti-inflation action must be started immediately. "Postponing the price stabilization effort only shifts into the future a cost which continues to grow and one day must become unsupportable," it explains. It leads to further unemployment, increases protectionist pressures and encourages "growing deterioration of international economic relations."

Varying Rates

GATT's message to those trying to tamper with, or modify, the monetary system so as to achieve monetary stability in the absence of price stability was both clear-cut and scathing "No international monetary system, whether based oo fixed exchange rates, clean floating, or managed flexibility, can func-tion satisfactorily when the main trading countries are undergoing rapid inflation at such varying rates," it said. Among industrial countries, inflation rates last year ranged from a low of 1.3 percent in Switzerland and 3.9 percent in West Germany to 17 percent in Italy and 16 percent io Britain. The report ooted that after easing somewhat in the second half of 1977, inflationary pressures once again bad gained strength in the first half of this year, especially in the United States and Canada.

GATT, seeking to reassure poli-cy makers and world leaders fearing increased unemployment as a result of strong anti-inflationary believing that in the present circumstances, rapid price stabiliza-tion could be achieved with less hardship thao is generally

It added that the "risks of making price stability unquestionably the priority policy goal are small compared to those created by continuing inflation, the spread of protectionist policies and the growing deterioration of international economic relations which they entail." There are no benefits for the society as a whole, only losses, from inflation in the long run," the report said. The report urged major govern-ments to make "a credible commitment" to restore price stability at a steady pre-announced pace over the next few years. This, the report said, could hardly fail to reduce economic uncertainty, a development that would strengthen business investment and so facilitate the transition.

The economists said that the

Britain Reserves Decline

LONDON, Sept. 4 (AP-DJ) -Britain's official reserves, including currencies, gold and special drawing rights, fell by $330 million in August to $16.41 billion and follows a $193-million rise in July and a fall of $119 milbon in June, the Treasury said today. The underlying ontflow of reserves, net of offiborrowing and repayments, was $151 million compared with an inflow of $328 million in July and a $49-million outflow in June.

weakness of business investment markedly in 1977, to 4.5 percent after three years of recovery is from 15 percent in 1976, than striking — and explainable only in exports, to 4.5 percent from II perterms of uncertainties and distor- cent. tions created by inflation.

in analyzing recent monetary developments, the GATT economists concluded that while all changes in currency exchange rates are not in response to inflation differentials, "there is little or oo prospect of achieving exchange rate sta-bility until inflation differentalls are substantially narrowed."

Moreover, the economists reiterated that a change in cominal exchange rates by itself cannot eliminate a current-account deficit of surplus. They argued that: "A current-account deficit reflects an excess of national expenditure over national production. Unless the underlying domestic factors which determine the relation between expenditure and productioo (such as fiscal policy and the rate of mone-tary expansion) are altered simultaneously, the impact of the devaluation on the country's international competitiveness will be quickly

World Trade Up

On world trade, the economist ooted that growth accelerated in the first half of this year from a year earlier, though the rate still was well below that of 1976. GATT said data from the large industrial countries showed a vol-ume growth in the first half of close 10 6 percent, faster than the increase in all 1977 of 4 percent, but still well below the 11-percent rate of growth in 1976. Barring a sharp reversal of this trend, the body predicted that trade growth this year will be "somewhat larger than last year." For 1977, GATT's trade growth figures were in line with its earlier forecasts. It said that io terms of much of the increase was due to inflatioo and exchange-rate changes. In industrial countries, growth of

It said that based on rough estimates, exports to developing countries in 1977 increased at a faster pace than the exchange of goods among industrial nations. Imports from developing countries, however, increased slightly less.

The report added that if annual growth rates of gross domestic product in the 1963-73 period are compared with 1973-77, industrial countries show a slowdown to 2 percent from 5 percent, while oilimporting developing oations showed a slowdown to only 4 percent from 6 percent. The difference is even more marked in industrial output, with the average annual growth rate slowing in industrial countries to 1 percent from 6 per-cent, compared with a slowdown in oil-importing developing countries to only 6 percent from 8 percent. GATT concluded that "even though it largely reflects more rapid population growth, the sturdiness of aggregate economic growth in the latter group of countries (oilimporting developing lands), along with the expansion in the oil-exporting developing countries, now constitutes an important stabilizing force in the world economy."

There was a significant increase protectionist measures by industrial countries last year, with a "dangerous situation" developing in the chemical industry, the report

Most of the import-restricting measures fell into a few well-de-fined sectors. Restrictions oo trade in textiles and clothing were substantially tightened. Trade in steel in the two largest markets — the United States and the EEC — was put under severe restraint.

It said: "Although an attempt year, up about 13 percent from to establish a European synthetic year, up about 13 percent from to establish a European synthetic fiber cartel has encountered a diffigrowth as in 1976 over 1975. European Monetary Plan Seen Operational by '79 of the nine member states of the European Economic Community begins tomorrow in an effort to harmer out detailed blueprints of a European Monetary System that is sapposed to go into effect next

Despite wide differences on how the EMS should work a high-placed source maintained that the timetable for setting up the system aimed at stabilizing European currencies would be kept.

Deputies of central bank goveroors are scheduled to meet in Brussels tomorrow to discuss details of the EMS. Plenary sessions of the EEC Monetary Committee are slated to follow Wednesday and Thursday.

The committee is to complete an ioterim report on work oo the EMS for the EEC finance ministers' meeting Sept. 8.

Deputies of the EEC central bankers' committee will also meet Sept. Il in Basel for further work on the EMS. Sept. 12, the plenary session of the central bankers' committee in Basel is to review the mooetary committee work and to add its final remarks to it.

Qualified sources said major differences, especially as regards the future exchange mechanism in the EMS and the creation of a European Mooetary Fund have not been narrowed by experts who have been discussing the problems since late July. But, these sources said, the further weakening of the dollar on foreign exchange markets in recent weeks has contributed to determi-

EEC leaders, at their Bremen summit July 6-7, agreed on the necessity to seek more stable exchange rates within Europe, and requested an operational system by the beginning of 1979.

Blueprints are to be finalized by Oct. 31 and final proposals should be agreed upon among finance ministers during October for the EEC leaders to make the last decisions at their oext summit, Dec. 4-5

Discussions so far, it is understood, have produced major differences between the member states in the current European joint-float arrangement, the snake, on ooe side, and oon-snake members on

Specifically, West Germany, the three Benelux states and Denmark, who are in the snake, favor an EMS exchange system centered around a unit of account - likely to be called European currency unit -based on what is called a parity grid. This would mean that the current European unit of account. based on a basket of EEC currencies, will be used to fix parities of EEC currencies at a given date. Currencies thus fixed would be allowed to float against each other within a oarrow bandspread, similar to what currently happens in the snake. Noo-snake members, however want the reference unit to be based on a currency basket which would allow more flexibility in interven-tion. This would enable weaker currencies to stay within the EMS in times of monetary pressure, prota-gonists of a more flexible currency basket as a reference unit argue.

Sources also report that discussions have not yet been able to solve problems connected with establishing a European Monetary the fund should be used in facilitating intervention in support of pari-

Japan Joy on China Pact May Be Rushing Things

By Henry Scott-Stokes

TOKYO, Sept. 4 (NYT) — Since port oil and coal to Japan in return for heavy iodustrial equipment and peace and friendship in Peking early last month, after six years of bestiation, a mood of emphoria bas swept Japan, and hardly a day has gone by without the announcement of some great oew vista in Sino-Japanese trade or cooperation.

There are high hopes that con-tacts between the oations will mul-tiply and that business will expand. Last week, the Tokyo newspaper Asahi reported that China has proposed that an eight-year trade agreement concluded in February be expanded from $20 billioo to $40 billion.

But Japanese officials warn that these are still early days. "All that bas happened is that a mood has been created." said a diplomat, "and we are delighted with that, but we still have to lay a foundation for the future."

Diplomats say that although there is talk here of a great range of magnificent projects — in railway electrification, in offshore oil exploration and, most of all, in trade - it is a mistake to assume that a world-winning marriage of Japanese technology and capital and Chioese manpower is taking place.

"Stirring Times"

"These are surring times," said a Foreign Ministry official. "It's good to see progress around us. We have been separated from the main-land for too loog, when you considthat we have similar cultures. But there are political and historical differences between us, too."

He added: "We are not seeing the creation of something like a China-Japan Inc. — far from it." Officials here are concerned that the whole nature of the new treaty with China may be misunderstood, above all in Southeast Asia, where the economic scale of countries like Indonesia and Thailand is so much smaller than that of Japan,

There are, bowever, huge differences remaining between China and Japan, fundamental gaps that have to be overriden before such agreements as the latest trade pact can be given concrete meaning.

The most basic of these differences is that Japan is a capitalist society and China a communist

This is easy to overlook in all the excitement of the hour," said another Japanese diplomat, "but BRUSSELS, Sept. 4 (AP-DJ) — cation within EEC monetary ranks

" 'Why should we do that?' they asked. You are a rich country, and we are very poor. "

The parallel is pertinent to China. The key to the expansion of Sino-Japanese trade is financing by Japan. Last week a mission from Japan's Export-Import Bank visit-ed Peking and was told that China would, for the first time since the revolution, accept bank loans from abroad to finance its plans for industrial expansion.

But the question remained whether China would accept the terms that Japan proposed: a mini-umum interest rate of 6 percent on major projects in natural resources — mainly drilling for offshore oil and digging coal in China's large but antiquated mines for export to Japan. This is crucial to the Sino-Japanese long-term trade agree-ment under which China is to ex-

U.S. Deceleration Deemed Favorable

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (NYT) - The mid-summer numbers show a U.S. economy slowing considera-hly from the blisteriog 8 percent growth rate in the second quarter.

But most analysts see this as more favorable than oot - it could mean relief from double-digit inflation rates and, if not tower interest rates, at least stabilization at current levels. A healthier tone in the stock and bond markets seems to lend some support to this bullish and the acceleration of both consumer and business spending in anticipation of continuing inflation.

This has already created some manufacturing and distribution bottlenecks. Automobile sales, which had softened during the winter months, not only bounced back with the advent of better weather, but reached a record annual rate of 12.5 million units in April.

Other durable goods such as furniture and appliances made a good showing for a time in the spring . but have since eased.

The close to 11-percent annual rate of inflation in the first half of 1978 mainly mirrored sharply advancing food prices. Weakening productivity, the higher cost of imports due to the declining dollar, wage settlements sticking at stub-bornly high levels, the bigger payroll tax and the impact of myriad government regulations were nong other factors behind the adverse inflation rate.

The Hawks

One group of economists known as the bawks, mainly the more con-servative thinkers led by Paul McCracken, a chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in Republican administrations, argues that the only way to wring inflation out of the ecocomy is to cut back demand pressures through draconi-an fiscal and monetary policies.

The doves, led by Brookings Institution's Senior Fellow Arthur Okun, warn that just to halve today's inflation rate by the bawk method would trigger a recession far deeper than the double-sized 1973-1975 decline. Their prescription is more active jaw-boning, using taxes, government purchasing or other inducements to influence moderate wage-price behavior. This is the approach favored by the Carter administration.

Less buoyancy in economic acuvity coincides with the higher interest rates introduced two weeks ago by the Federal Reserve to counter the weakness of the dollar in international markets. Though this could accentuate contractions later in the year, so far the higher rates seem to have spared the housiog industry, which is still barreling along at an annual clip of two mil-

Preliminary indications for industrial activity, retail sales and employment for August show no acceleration from July's slow pace. More disconcerting is the trend in durable goods orders. These have been growing at a less rapid rate since February and actually fell in June and July.

"Any external depressive could trigger a recession," warns Terrence Larsen, vice president and econo-mist of the Philadelphia National Bank. But, like many of his col-leagues he comes up with the more comforting forecast. Even though the margin of safety is small, he says. "We believe the odds favor continuation of the current expansion through 1979, albeit at a

LONDON. Sept. 4 (AP-DJ) — Lockheed's deht is oow less than half of what it was to the crisis days of the early 1970s, and this improved financial outlook, according to chairman Roy Anderson, will give the aircraft company greater cope in deciding its loog-term

In an interview, Mr. Anderson said Lockheed's debt is about $450 million, down from $555 million at the end of 1977 and a high of $920 million in 1974. By the end of the year, Lockheed's shareholder equity should be about $275 mil-lion compared with debt of $425 million and by the end of 1980 "our total debt will probably he less than shareholder equity." he says.

When Lockheed's borrowings were over $900 million four years ago, shareholder equity was only about $25 million.

Mr. Anderson, who is in England for the Famborough International Air Show, said Lockheed wanted to coovert $250 million of its bank debt into a revolving credit that the company could draw upon when

The company's 'improved finances give us the flexibility to look into new product lioes." he said, Lockheed is involved in loogrange planning up to 1985 "to see what sort of a company we want to look like," he said. He said the company was trying to diversify, specifically mentioning its joint venture with units of Royal Dutch/Shell and Standard Oil of Indiana for the development of underwater mining techniques, espe-cially for seabed manganese

Mr. Anderson indicated that Lockheed might also enter into ma-jor project-management contracts in Egypi and the Sudan.

Asked about the TnStar program, Mr. Anderson said Lockheed hoped to have orders by the year's end or by the first quarter of 1979 that would allow it to gn ahead with development of the Dash-400 version of the L-1011 jetliner. The Dash TriStar would have a capacity of 200-225 persons and would be suited for nonstop transcontinental U.S. routes.

Lockheed's planning has taken into account the recently announced Boeing decision to build the 757 and 767 jetliners us well as the likelihood that Airbus Industrie would go ahead with the development of the A310 Airhus However, these planes, as well as the 777 jetliner Boeing is considering, will not overlap that much with cept for the smaller TriStars, Mr. Anderson said.

He said ooe of the main advantages of the Dash-400 would be that it could be available by late 1981, which is at least a year earlier than other new jets that have recently been announced. Air industry sources said one airline is interested in the Dash-400, but that the company does oot want to go ahead with the plane until another airline is ready to buy it.

Lockheed has recently increased overall TriStar production to an annual rate of 20 units, compared with a minimum normal capacity of 18 a year, be said. In 1977

Lockheed's Tri-Star output dropped to an annual rate equivalent to about eight planes a year.

Mr.Anderson said that just over 150 TriStars have been delivered to customers, and that the order book now stands at a bit under 100 planes. Of these, 32 are firm orders and the rest options or second

Although Lockheed is now responsible for all TriStar produc-tion. Mr. Anderson said, the company might seek a "collaborative effort" if it decides to develop "stretched" versions of the planes, A decision on building stretched versions of the TriStar is not expected soon, although Lockheed officials say some TriStar operators have already indicated that they would like a lengthened model of the plane, nne that was capable of carrying more passengers.

THE RUSSIAN FASCISTS

Tragedy and Farce in Exile, 1925-1945 By John J. Stephan. Harper & Row. 450 pp. $15.

Reviewed by Abraham Brumberg

"fascist," presumably (and wrong-ly, in my opinion) to suggest that what was once regarded as an illegitimate child of 19th-century socialist ideas has now reached its ultimate state of degeneration. "The Russian Fascists," however, is not about Russian Communists, but about a handful of emigres - oever more than 10,000 — who for two decades combined fascist rhetoric and ideology with fierce Russian nationalism in a quixotic crusade nationalism in a quixone crusade against the Soviet regime.

Essentially, John Stephan's book is about two men — Konstantin Vladimirovich Rodzaevsky, and Anastase Andreivich Vonsiatsky. The first, born in Siberia, left his parental home at the age of 18, and made his way to Harbin. Manchuria. Restless, vain, amhitious and vengeful, Rodzaevsky could not have found a more hospitable climate for his activities. Harbin was mate for his activities: Harbin was teeming with Russian emigres, most of whom cordially detested Russia'a oew rulers.

Rodzaevsky's political ideas were largely visceral: he hated the Jews, he professed to abhor "the chaos and decadence of capitalism and liberalism" oo less than commu-nism, and he was drawn to the messianic strands in Russian Orthodoxy. He also admired Mussolini's idea of a "corporate state," hut it was primarily the ootioo of a powauthoritarian, regenerated and Judenrein Russia with which he appealed to his would-be followers.

During the 1930s, his Russian Fascist Party (later known as the All-Russian Fascist Party and then as the Russian Fascist Union) gave as the Russian Fascist Onion) gave its members uniforms, oewspapers, parades (replete with the Nazi hand-raised salute), songs, a taste of extortionism — as well as a gnawing sense of futility. After the Japanese occupied Manchuria in 1931, Rodzaevsky and his cohorts became little more than the pawns of the Japanese Army and secret police, which used them as instruments of control over the entire Russian emigre community. If there had been any doubts that the Russian fascists were dependent on the whims of their Japanese masters, the Nazi-Soviet Pact of August 1939 put the matter firmly to rest, Rodzaevsky and his party were, of course, shattered to find Germany allied with its arch-enemy - com-munism and "world-Jewry" (which to the fascists were one and the same thing).

Hitler's altack on Russia io June 1941 seemed, at first, to presage a change in the fortunes of the Harbin fascists, who delighted in the early defeats of the Red Army. What the Russian fascists were loath to recognize, however, was that there was no room in Hitler's plans for a "national Russian the Slavs, like the Jews, were Untermenschen. Moreover, as far as most Russian emigres were coocerned. Hitler's armies were their country. The wave of pro-So-viet (that is to say, essentially patriotic) sentiment that swept the Russian emigre communities finally en-gulfed the vozhd (leader) himself. The Soviet hlitzkrieg against Ja-pan in August 1945 threw Rodzaevsky into (as he put it) "a spiritual crisis." He wrote an extraordinary letter to Stalin in which he confessed his past mistakes, the biggest of which was his failure to recognize that Stalinism was the ideal embodiment and realization of "our Russian fascism." Ludicrously vain to the end, he offered his ser-

Solution to Previous Puzzle

The Soviets accepted his offer and a year later after a typical Moscow trial Rodzaevsky and a number of other systems. emigres were executed in the cellars of the Lubianka.

The other protagonist of Stephan's book, Anastase Vonsialsky, had much in common with Rodzaevsky, but also differed from him in several essential respects. While Rodzaevsky was consumed by murky passions. Vonsiatsky was interested largely in showmanship—though, to be sure, of a noxious kind. The son of a czarist colonel, he participated in the Russian civil war, made his way to Paris, where in 1921 a wealthy American diversity. in 1921 a wealthy American divor-cee, twice his age, took a fancy to him and married him. Ensconced in a hucolic estate in Connecticut, and with large numbers of dollars at his disposal, Vonsiatsky gave free rein to his penchants, which ranged from golf and amateur theatricals to politics. Much like his compatri-ot in Harbin, Vonsiatsky was artracted to the military, nationalist and anti-liberal aspects of fascism; and anti-liberal aspects of fascism; unlike Rodzaevsky, however, he would have oo truck with anti-senitism. As Stephan puts it: "Vonsiataky paid little attendon to dogma.

The most important thing was to get the show on the road."

The "show" was the All-Russian

Fascist Organization, which Vonsi-atsky and a few fellow-emigres founded in 1933. The "organiza-tioo" was in fact no more than a figment of Vonsiatsky's imagination; it oever numbered more than perhaps a few hundred members. But so generous was his doting wife, that Vonsiatsky was able to publish a moothly journal (called "Fashist"), issue electrifying and altogether medacious claims about the successes of his "disciples" in Russia, and prompt Rodzaevsky to hring him to Harbin to head a unified worldwide Russian fascist par-ty. The honeymoon between the two vozhds lasted a mere six months. Back oo his Connecticut estate, Vonsiatsky surrendered himself more and more to his fantasies, giving interviews and staging parties at which he drunkenly de-claimed the forthcoming "fascist-revolution,"

His antics finally led to suspicions, fanned as much by an American anti-Nazi congressman as by a pro-Stalioist hack, Albert E. Kahn, who io a book published in 1942 luridly portrayed Vonsiatsky as a confidant of Goebbels, a consummate Nazi spy and a dedicated ally of the American German Bund of the American German Bund. With America engaged in a war against fascism, such charges however inflated — were bound to fall on fertile soil. In June 1941; Vonsiatsky was tried for espionage, Although the evidence was threadbare and the prosecutor little more than an ambitious (and illiterate) politician, Vonsiatsky was found guilty and sentenced to five years imprisonment. His worst enemy, it seems clear, was his own hraggado-spent his last years — now a con-vinced monarchist — in Florida, reminiscing about his past, raising a soo (from a common-law marriage to a woman he met shortly after he regained freedom) and oo casionally courting the press. He died in 1965.

John Stephan, a professor of history at the University of Hawaii, writes with wit, irony, clan and with a remarkable grasp of the ma-terial which he has uncarthed from Japanese, German, British and American sources. His book might perhaps be regarded as a splendid example of "mini-history," but its implications are fascioatiog.
Among them are the curious similarities between Stalinism and fascism (including even a Rodzaevsky "three-year plan" to bring about the downfall of the USSR), and the disturbing parallel between the use of nationalist-religious symbols by Russian fascist groups in the 1930s and by various Russian emigre groups today.

Abraham Brumberg, former editor of "Problems of Communism," is now a guest scholar at the Kennan Institute for Higher Russian Studies.

Coney Island's Long Slide Downhill

By Lee Lescaze

CONEY ISLAND, N.Y. (WP) — On a busy Sunday 40 years ago, a million people would come here, making this 3½-mile stretch of beach, boardwalk and amusement park temporarily the sixth largest city in the nation.

They called Coney Island "The Play-ground of the World" and nobody snickered, but the world was already passing it by. For Coney Island, it has been a long slide, not as stomach-wrenching or thrillpacked as the rides in the amusement park. but just as inevitably heading in the same direction -down.

Only a small section of the amusement area still operates. Weeds grow where Steeplechase Park used to pack them in to watch women's skirts blown aloft by air jets. Signs have long since lost letters, paint peels, games, bars and theaters along Surf Avenue are shuttered.

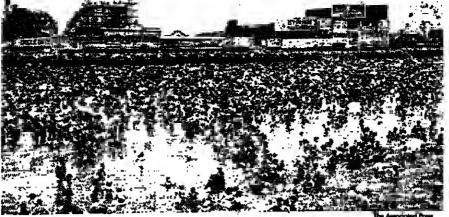

In the era of theme parks, of Walt Disney and all his creations, Coney Island is an ugly ducking. If it had a theme, it would be seediness, nr, as a Chamber of Commerce spokes-man called it, "honky-tonk." The 300-foothigh parachute jump proudly acquired from the 1939 World's Fair is the tallest derelict. If it can still be seen from 30 miles at sea, as Cnney Island used to boast, the sailors see only its wire cables flapping in the wind, an old wreck whose last owner tried to make it a sort of aviary - the tallest bird-feeding station in the world.

People with money to go elsewhere haven't flocked to Cnney Island for years. On a summer Sunday, much of the wide. fine-grained beach that you once had to reach early in the day to capture a good spot is empty. Robert Moses nace remarked that people packed the beach so closely that each one took up less space than a coffin. Grave diggers could plant a lot of coffins in the sand today without disturbing a soul.

Coney Island was a fashionable playground when it was difficult for New Ynrkers to go to Florida, the Caribbean or California for their vacations. In 1920, the 5cent-fare subway was extended to Cooey Island and the resort gave up its fashionable character and was jammed by people of all incomes. The Playground of the World picked up a new nickname — "The Empire Charles Lindbergh rode the Cyclone, the fastest of what were four Cooey Island roller coasters, and Coney Island quoted him as saying he considered "the Cyclooe a greater experience than flying an airplane at top speed." On a recent Sunday, a couple in black leather and dyed hair (his: white, hers: blue and red) rode the Cyclone's front car again and again, holding their fists aloft. "Our clientele wouldn't like a theme."

Crowds at Coney Island in 1967.

said Matthew Kennedy, executive secretary of the Coney Island Chamber of Commerce. Some only come to ride one ride and stay on it half a day. It's the nature of the beast."
"This place used to be beautiful," said a woman who bas worked 47 years at Coocy Island. "Now, it's detriorated and so is its

When Coney Island was beautiful, Eddie Cantor, Jimmy Durante and Irving Berlin were singing waiters. Jim Jeffries fought Gentleman Jim Corbett for the beavyweight championship. Cary Grant walked around oo stilts with a sandwich board advertising the rides, and Al Capone was a bouncer. Angelo Siciliano worked on a his muscles before changing his name to Charles Atlas.

Long before it became the Playground of the World, however, Cooey Island had a history of sharp dealing and coo men. One story even has it that the Canarsie Indians pulled the first fast one when they sold it to the Dutch in 1649. The Dutch had to buy it again from the Nyacks, who really owned it. The Dutch named it for its large rabbit ("konijn") population; hence Cooey in Eng-

In the late 19th century, one writer described Coney Island as a place for men who dug clams hy day and cut threats by night. It was infamous for its three-card monte game.

Three-card monte has returned, along with a dice game operated oo makeshift tables along the giant pier. The pier is also oow lined with crabbers who turn chicken into crabs. Traps are baited with pieces of raw chicken fresb from their supermarket

On a good weekend, a small crowd of John Travolta look-alikes can be found showing off their steps on the Surf Avenue pavement oext to the disco bumper cars. Coney Island once had six imitators in the

New York area, but most of them have been replaced by high-rise apartments or shopping centers.

Coney Island bonky-tonk ambience is what the oew, successful amusement parks are not. They thrive on clean-shaven employees for whom "have a nice day" is a constant refrain.

At Coney Island, close shaving is an elec-tive and genial good wishes are nobody's stock in trade.

Riders on the Spook-a-Rama get their first fright from signs warning them not to touch the bushes passing by them: "Danger, Poisoo Ivy," the signs say. The Wonder Wheel, a 58-year-old, 150-foot-high monster that gives anyone who thought he was boarding a tame Ferris wheel a nasty surprise, carries two dogs around and around. The dogs are a tradition of the Garms family, which built the Wonder Cuney Island today depresses people who knew it long ago as children, oot only because it is sleazy, but also because it is unsuccessful. It is easier to see the peeling paint if oo people are blocking your view.

But for all the seediness, Kennedy of the Chamber of Commerce said that this summer was Cooey Island's best since 1970. After Labor Day weekend, Coney Island will have attracted 16 million visitors, he said.

The reason for this year's upturn is the reverse of the reason for Coney Island's long decline. Kennedy speculated. People doo't have as much money as in years past and they aren't going as far afield for their recre-

The fare is now 50 cents, but the Play-ground of the World and Empire of the Nickel, which among its other achievements made the hot dog famous, is still only a subway ride away from the city.

Larry Wagner, of Columbus, Ohio, but the law finally caugh: up with him and sent Lord Russell back to the kennel where he belongs. Wagoer, 40, pleaded guilty to a charge of using his dog's name at work so he could collect $644 in unemployment benefits under his real name. Franklin County Municipal Court Judge William Boyland ficed him $100 and suspended a 60-day workhouse sentence on the condition that Wagner pay back the benefits to the state. Wagner collected the money while he was working for a private bus firm in February. He reversed his dog's name - Lord young people smoked marijuana between the statues of Abraham Lincoln and Stepben Douglas during a rally on the steps of the Capi-tal to protest U.S. pot laws. About 23 members of the Youth loternational Party were arrested during the rally, which was filmed by plainclothes police who bad been informed of the event and had hrought vidcotape equipment to the site. The group arrived at the site at about nooo and sat on the steps of the Capitol as the odor of marijuana drifted through the air. Some sprawled oo the lawn, which bad been dotted with "No Trespassing" signs in anticipation of the event. State officials said members of the group had asked for a permit to hold the protest, but the requests were denied. Although plainsclothes police roamed the site with videotape cameras and state police were posted a few blocks away, the rally cootinued undis-turbed for about three hours. Then local and state police in riot gear moved in and began dispersing the group, removing the Yippies from the steps. A few demonstrators greeted police with taunts and eers.
